

Monday, August 3, 2009

By Ariana Gordon

3 Sites for...Finding a Babysitter

See the best sites for hiring qualified people to watch your kids

Searching for a babysitter who meets or exceeds your expectations can be quite a task. Finding that special fit someone who connects with your kids, cleans up after themselves and keeps your children safe and secure is truly something to be desired. If you are looking for a quick and easy way to find a qualified caregiver that you can trust, here are three sites that will make the search for a babysitter safe and hassle-free.

Sittercity.com

With over 150,000 caregivers featured on the site, Sittercity.com boasts “the nation's largest and most easily accessible database for babysitters, nannies and pet sitters.” All of the sitters listed on the site are over the age of 18 and their profiles include whether a background check has been done, which safety certificates they've earned and reviews from past clients. The site also features a one-of-a-kind library, where both care seekers and caregivers can find out how to best interview and screen potential sitters as well as third-party site recommendations for background checks. The best thing about Sittercity.com is that you can try it out for a week at no cost, and then choose either a monthly or annual fee plan.